Muscle and Efficiency Matter

High feed costs and an increased focus on sustainability puts efficiency front and center in an industry challenged to do more with less. Limousin and Lim-Flex genetics allow producers to reap the benefits of feed efficiency while capitalizing on the breed's muscling and cutability advantages. Think Efficiency...Think Muscle...Think Limousin.

All cattlemen realize the importance of big weaning weights as well as impressive post weaning gain. What if those same cattle, consumed less feed and had better than average gain while producing a Choice or better carcass? Using a Continental breed on a British-based cow herd gives you the best of both worlds—gain, feed efficiency and carcass quality.

Performance Matters

Whether you sell at weaning, after backgrounding or on the rail, performance matters. While the definition of performance differs from operation to operation, the importance of performance cannot be understated as it is the key building block to profitability.

Calving Ease & Carcass Bulls

There is no substitute for live calves that will ultimately make the grade. While at opposite ends of the production calendar, both traits are key to overall profitability. Calving-ease without growth, much like quality grade without cutability, does not give producers the opportunity to capture all the premiums available.

He combines a fresh pedigree with a fantastic phenotype guaranteed to catch our eye. He is sired by WZRK Heavy Weight 4063, a son of CJSL Data Bank 6124D. On paper, he has 60 weaning weight and a 92 yearling weight EPD, coupled with impressive carcass figures. Double black and double polled, we think OPHM 41K will get the job done.

Limousin Makes The Grade

Limousin beef is competitive on both the quality grade scale and yield grade system thanks to the breed's characteristics which combine heavy muscling with low fat. Together, this results in a carcass both highly lean and efficient with a fine marbling and flavor throughout. Consistently, Limousin beef has been lauded for its taste earning numerous awards when compared alongside other breeds.
